

The Great Escape

By Lori Mae Achterberg
Dallastown

Have you ever shut out the world, just given up the fight?
You can do it anytime you want; your mind gives you the right.

Just close your eyes a second. Imagine one brick, that's all.
The brick begins to multiply and soon you have a wall.

The wall becomes a house, just big enough for you.
Now it's time to relax and discover something new.

It may be a place you've never been, or a sight you've never seen.
You're in your own world now. It's almost like a dream.

You may become a bird, flying high and free,
Or sitting on your yacht, floating out to sea.

Perhaps you're stretched out on the beach, or playing in the sand.
Maybe you're with a loved one, walking hand in hand.

Remember there are no limits, to what you see or do.
You're in your own little house, and no one can bother you.

But don't forget, it's only a break, I know it's fun, you see,
The time will come to tear the house down, and get back to reality.

So use your imagination, if you've had a stressful day.
It starts with one little brick, and then you're on your way.

I hope you like your house, mine's in perfect shape.
The sign above the door reads, "The Great Escape!"